

Sent: Tue, 12 Jun 2007 07:03:24 +0100
From: PaulsList@lists.paulowe.org

Subject: The End of a Phase...

Greetings.

Looks like this is the last tour -- of this type anyway. Of course we can only speak of the moment, things are always changing, and, the way it is looking right now, this could well be the last tour altogether.

All through my life this has happened... Everything seems to be going delightfully well, and then, suddenly, the impulse/urge/message/feeling/sensation to drop everything. Leaving school at fourteen; leaving good jobs and positions after a year or so; getting married; leaving the marriages; hitch-hiking around the world; leaving excellent situations in Africa, Hong Kong, San Francisco; starting the growth centre in London, and leaving it; going to India for two weeks, and staying there for eight years; leaving the family; leaving the guru; starting, and then leaving the villa in Italy; starting, and leaving wonderful relationships, and marriages; buying a house in Australia. And so on.

The difference this time is that I do not see what, if anything, is next.

I could think of logical reasons for stopping the tours. I have been actively travelling and doing this for over forty years. There are changes happening in the physical and other energies -- both inside and out.

I have become very, very sensitive. The gap has grown very large. I have said everything -- many times. I am not being fully heard. Apart from a few exceptions, there have not been many dramatic changes. And so on. And, as in the past, it is not really logical.

I am told that the London weekend was excellent, with lots of changes and movement. I imagine that the intensity will continue for the rest of the tour. I also see the possibility that the meetings will be extra strong for the rest of the tour -- in a different way than usual. It is time to join with the rapid changes that are happening on the planet.

So what about my saying that I have not seen many major changes? I am talking about a complete disconnection from the ritual/addiction/automatic behaviour of the personality/character/neu-rosis/personal/self-centered story.

I have come to see and accept that the majority of people on this planet are not only not aware, but are not aware that they are not aware. They are not aware that there is something more to be aware about.

So what about us?

All I have been sharing, for all these years, about relationships, jealousy, not complaining, taking responsibility, realising that there is never a justifiable reason to be angry at another, being grateful, putting back into life at least as much as you take out. It isn't happening is it. Incremental changes, but not major ones.

Someone was saying to me the other day that they have had experiences of the state that cannot be described -- beyond the personal. I could see and feel that as they spoke. Beautiful. They also said that they entered a delightful and clear state when they were doing their sessions and leading their groups. I could see the delight of that in them also. Yet out of the sessions or group situations they still get angry, and jealous. They still have many of the controlling, arrogant, superior, patronising, and drinking patterns of their mother. And they know that, and are not taking care of them.

Another person, with two exceptional children, still smokes. Another person is continuing with an action that is upsetting someone else. Another is not only very poisonously angry, they are taking legal action -- for something very trivial. Just adding to the pollution of the planet.

And some very beautiful things are happening for some people as well.

And it is not serious. It doesn't matter. Nothing matters. And... everything has a consequence. Every action has an equal and opposite reaction.

If only you got to see that law you would not only become very conscious of what you did, and said, but every single thought also.

I think the remaining events are going to be very interesting, and fun.

Sending lots of love, and life...

paul

From: Sophia
Date: 10 June 2007 23:42:33 BDT

Subject: tuning in to you...

dear paul,

Since the weekend in London I kept hearing a voice that says to tune in.

I have been doing so, in quiet moments, and also in "busy" moments, when driving, or cooking, in the shower ...

But then the interesting thing is that often when I tune into you I feel totally blank, I get a feeling of "nothingness", a stillness, yet profound at the same time.
and tonight something clicked and I felt that I needed to write down a few things and translate the sensations into words, although still not many...

I don't know if any of that will make sense, just thought that the best would be to share it.

It feels like an effort to be on this planet at the moment. like a balloon filled with helium that anytime could fly away, sometimes your energy will feel the same.

partly it is the energy here being gross, insensitive, almost painful for your system. partly has to do with some sort of adjustment that is happening in your body.

I close my eyes and my head leans forward and the feeling is to fall down and down, it is totally utterly dark, and the only sensation I get is absolute delight almost ecstatic, the word death comes up, although is not a physical one.
Some kind of angelic voices in the back ground, chanting.. they seem to be dancing, protecting and sending messages.

It is time for a pause. Its time for letting the new settle and the old fade away. Retirement is good on this physical plane although retirement doesn't exist in your soul where a much deeper commitment is living.
Your vibration is getting higher and finer, and at the same time you are losing more and more interest in anything, even the things that interested you the most. A lack in motivation, in wanting, in needing.

I don't get a a lot of information on the changes that are occurring, yet, they are asking you to stay open, listen and recognize their messages, which in the near future they will be very loud!!

They ask to be prepared for unpredictable and sudden situations, mainly in connections with travelling. And in a way it won't feel like a big deal. It doesn't feel like at the moment there is a clear message or a clear picture, it feels as though you need is a lot of time in nature and alone or in really good company. But I get very few people!!!

I also feel that there will be times where your body will not allow you to do certain things, some sort of "sabotaging" (with good intentions) meetings or situations that would be inappropriate for you.

I can see the group in Germany happening, but I have a vague feeling about New York and Harbin. Like is still shaping up energetically.

I feel the group in Germany will be different and somehow a new beginning, yet it won't feel like its making a big difference either. I truly get no tour next year. I would encourage the team not to push but to stay in tune with Paul and the changes that are happening for him and the planet.

Part of your nature is that you will be always present, whether you are on tour or not, whether you are in Europe or thousands of miles away, your teaching will find a way to spread across the globe. You will be sharing insights sitting in your sun room and people will still get it. No need to travel long distance anymore.

I get a lot of caring and protection towards you.

and .. I keep hearing this voice:
We all need to tune in. Don't focus on the outcome, don't try to interpret, no need to understand. Simply plug in with a higher frequency, this will be your contribution to the planet. Simply tune in.

Just thought to call you in the next days while you are in Devon...

with love...
sophia